Introduction

The intent of these guidelines is to help you make a favorable impression and to help enhance the reputation of the accounting program here at the Fredonia State University School of Business. These guidelines are NOT intended to be a personal criticism of you. It is intended to help you better fit into the professional world.

In your career preparation, you should take some time to learn how to distinguish between the different modes of dress and behavior for any social event for which you may be asked to attend. A social event may be casual, informal, business or formal. You may want to review various fashion magazines for appropriate attire to wear to an event in each of these categories and begin to build your wardrobe. You may want to glance at Web sites that result from a Google search of the phrase “professional attire” (in quotes).

You should also take some time to polish your manners and brush up on your business etiquette. Each spring semester the Accounting Society hosts “The Business Etiquette Dinner” at the White Inn. It is an opportunity for you to learn more about and practice your dinner manners in an intentionally non-embarrassing environment.

Remember, the impression you make reflects not only on you, but on the entire accounting program and School of Business here at Fredonia State. We all want it to be a favorable one.

Guidelines for Dress

In general, the look you should try to achieve for an evening business occasion, such as a dinner meeting of a professional organization, is a conservative, inconspicuous and indistinguishable one.

<td>Suit</td>
<td>Women should wear a dark suit - blue or gray in color, solid or pin stripe - made of an all-weather wool or wool blend. Suit coats are a must. It is harder for females to quickly establish a professional presence without a suit coat. A skirt is recommended, again, because it conveys professionalism much better than slacks. Skirts should be no more than 2” above the knee, and not much longer than mid-calf. Even though “tight is in,” it is most unprofessional, and usually very unflattering, as well. Please avoid tight clothing. Remember clothing should not be too tight, too sloppy, nor show too much skin. (In business, any skin between the neck and just above the knee may be too much.) Clothing that is at all “clingy” or sheer requires appropriate and modest lingerie underneath.</td>

<tr>
<td>Blouse</td>
<td>Wear a white, long-sleeved ½ inch longer than jacket sleeve, no collar button, clean, well-pressed and tucked in.</td>

Appropriate Behaviors

Before leaving
In advance, know when and from where the group is leaving. Be prompt! If for some last minute reason you can't go, please notify others. Dinner reservations have been made. It is rude to make a commitment and just not show. Sometimes emergencies do occur, but if you miss commitments too often it is a sign of poor personal time management skills.

During the event
Reception
Turn off cell phones for the evening.
No drinking is allowed.
No smoking where prohibited.
Mingle and meet new people.
Don't be yourself, be your “best” self!
Don't try too hard to impress. Be honest about what you know. As a student you are not expected to know as much as practicing professionals.
Shake hands firmly – not weakly, but not with a vise-like grip. Practice your interlock, grip, hold and release.
Be courteous and polite.
Be positive, upbeat, but not boisterous.
Be open to others’ viewpoints.
Be empathetic of others’ feelings.
Use appropriate greetings, such as, sir or ma’am, Mr./Ms. Do not call someone by their first name without their permission.
Have some safe topics of conversation ready for those inevitable lull periods.

Dinner
Practice your best dinner etiquette.
When in doubt about what to do next, follow another’s lead.
Use utensils from the outside in.

Speaker
Be quiet while the speaker has the floor.
Applaud at the appropriate times.

After the event
Meet at the van/car promptly.
